IF RURAL CARRIERS WENT ON Mrs. Jesse Hoel also dropped into rhyme

Suppose rural mail carriers would quit the job. Suppose country folks had to come to the post office after mail as they did once. Where would the postmaster put all the mail that came in? What would be do with the toms of daily newspapers, advertising circulars, ect., that now fill the mail sacks and railway postal cars? Now every farmer has a postoffice in front of his door. If rural delivery stopped, the postoffice would be jamined full of stuff within a week. The postoffice clerks would have a crowd coming to the delivery window. The results of the postoffice clerks would have a crowd coming to the delivery window. The results of the postoffice would be jamined full of stuff within a week. Practical Economy

Baking powders made from alum or phosphate may be bought for a trifle less than Royal Baking Powder, which is made from cream of tartar, derived from grapes.

Alum powders are not only cheap, but they differ greatly in leavening power.

If a cheap baking powder is used for a fine cake and the cake turns out a failure there is a waste of costly materials worth more than a whole can of the cheap baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder produces the finest food, and its use therefore, results in an actual saving.
